The Best Investment Tools
and Services of 2000

We have been amazed by the number and usefulness of tools and services out there to help the serious technology investor make better investment decisions.

We've seen good ones that we've fallen in love with. We've seen awful ones that would break your heart — and your wallet.

To help you navigate through the sea of products and services, we at Technology Investor Magazine are establishing our first annual Voyager Awards to tip our hats to the products we feel will make your investing more informed and, hopefully, more profitable.

We've broken down the investment tools into the standard order the typical investor will encounter them: decision support software, websites, trading hardware, education, portfolio management software and brokers.

Knowing that not all investors are cut from the same cloth, we've awarded multiple awards in each category. If one doesn't fit your investment style, try another.

We deliberately did not include specific prices because of the wide variety of prices and options — even from the same vendor.
